What is a CTP Program?

A CTP Program may be a degree, certificate, nondegree, or noncertificate program:

- Provided by a Title IV-participating institution
- Delivered to students physically attending the institution
- Designed to support students with intellectual disabilities seeking to continue academic, career and technical, and independent living instruction at an institute of higher education in order to prepare for gainful employment*
- Including an advising and curriculum structure
- Where students with intellectual disabilities have at least half of their participation in the program focus on academic components taken along with students without disabilities (more on next slide)
- Providing students with intellectual disabilities opportunities to participate in coursework and activities with students without disabilities

Note: CTP programs are considered an exception to the current Gainful Employment regulations. See GE Electronic Announcement #53 (5/20/2015)*

Applying to Have a CTP Program Approved

- You'll be following the provisions under 34 CFR 600.20 for adding a new educational program to your E-App (using an update application). Include:
 - A detailed description (up to 30 pages) of the CTP program addressing all components of the program under 34 CFR 668.231 (see link on later ED Links slide)
 - The school's policy for determining whether CTP students meet the program's standard of Satisfactory Academic Progress
 - The number of weeks of instructional time and the number of semester or quarter credit hours or clock hours in the program, including the equivalent credit or clock hours associated with noncredit or reduced credit classes or activities.
 - A description of either the credential offered (certificate or degree), or the identified outcome(s) for students enrolled in the program
 - A copy of the letter or notice sent to the school's accrediting agency informing the agency of the school's CTP program, including descriptions of the items bulleted above
- Reach out to your School Participation Division if you have any questions.

Helpful Tips

- Use the regulations (34 CFR Subpart O: 668.230 - 668.233) as your checklist to be sure that you've documented how your program meets all of the requirements
- Show how your program is designed to socially and academically integrate your CTP students with your general student population to the maximum extent possible
- Some of the requirements are broader, leaving schools a bit more room to find what works within their school's organizational structure and for their students. There can be multiple great paths to reach the same goal.
 - Talking through an example: matching your CTP students with inclusive extracurricular activities

Coming Soon: A CTP-Specific CIP Code!

- New 2020 CIP codes will include 30.0001, designating a program as a CTP program.
- Do not use the new CIP code before FSA systems are updated, or it will cause a record to "bounce" in the system.
- When the new CIP code is effective, nothing will change for eligibility of existing programs, and schools will not need to do anything in their E-App for the time being for existing programs. The new CIP code can be used in COD before the E-App is updated, but the next time the school recertifies their E-App it would need to be updated.
- New CIP code will be an option for schools to use. It won't be mandatory, though since it was created specifically for CTP programs we encourage schools to use it.
