Meeting Discussion

How Are States Approaching Services for Individuals Who Are Aging?

Retirement
Traumatic Brain Injury
Age-related changes

Pros and Cons of separate "retirement" services

A few stats

- There are an estimated 641,000 adults age 60 and older with IDD (ID 2013 Bureau of Facility Standards)
- Expecting these numbers will DOUBLE by 2030 when all post WWII baby boom generation born between 1946-1964 will be age 60+ (ID 2013 Bureau of Facility Standards)
- A demographic shift toward a greater aged population in disability services (Janicki, 2009)
- By 2025, over half of the workforce in supported employment services will be over the age of 50 (McDermott et al., 2009)

Other Impacts

- Limited choice making
- Limited awareness of options
- Age-related declines

Balance these realities with achieving a strong quality of life.

At what age do you think these service changes should occur?

Research suggests a disconnect between what older individuals are prepared to handle, and what is available through publicly-funded supports.

What are you learning about the needs of individuals who are aging in your state?

Family needs?

Community needs?

Emerging Strategies

- Assess based on changes across the life span
- Social development
- Continued choice making

Juggle making opportunities available and what is best for the chronological age of individuals

Key areas of focus for older adults in your state?

How is your state looking to provide quality community experiences for older adults with IDD for whom employment is no longer a priority?

Key partners in your state?

Service Structure - Pros and Cons

- Separate “retirement” service
- Or
- Supports for those with age-related issues that are available from a wide range of options

Transitional Person Centered Support Model

Would need to get this piece of work – might delete

The SELN is a place for states to connect, collaborate, and create cross-community support regarding pressing employment-related issues at state and federal levels for individuals with developmental disabilities.

The SELN was launched in 2006 as a joint program of the National Association of State Directors of Developmental Disabilities Services and the Institute for Community Inclusion at the University of Massachusetts Boston.
